

ARTS AND CULTURE

Art Time, Summer in the City

Rounding up all that is artsy and/or fartsy this summer.

By Roberta Fallon

Posted Jun. 15, 2010 |

Art Gallery at City Hall

The new 700-square-foot Art Gallery at City Hall, with its high ceilings, fixed walls and lots of natural light, brings art into the seat of power like never before. The brainchild of Gary Steuer, head of the Office of Arts, Culture and the Creative Economy, Art Gallery at City Hall lives at street level in Steuer's new offices. The gallery's mission is to help arts organizations with their programs; thus, On the Rise features work by 12 artists from three nonprofits: InLiquid, the Center for Emerging Visual Artists and Philadelphia Sculptors. The gallery is not an offshoot of the Art in City Hall program, which will continue to display art in the glass cases on the Second and Fourth floors. Rather, it will be run separately with the help of an Advisory Council made up of arts professionals, Steuer says. Check out the new gallery at the open house on June 17 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Opens June 17.